SANTIAGO DEL EXTREMO

Six young musicians from Chile represent most effectively and also with beautiful tonal/rythmical richness, the development of the Chilean New Song Movement which has grown constantly in this decade after the military putsch which overthrew President Allende's democratically elected socialist government.

Santiago's music has not developed in a 'cultural vacuum'. It grows out of a deep popular cultural tradition rooted in the early years of the Chilean working class movement and the work and songs of popular singers such as Violeta Parra and Victor Jara.

SANTIAGO DEL NUEVO EXTREMO is the best representative of an urban musical expression; it is the voice of many Chilean cities. Their music has a strong element of rock/jazz which is inspired by the works of Presley and Lennon and McCartney. It is this wonderful mixture of Latin American poetic rythms and tonalities with the power of rock and jazz which gives their performance a crisp and emotive sound not found in other Chilean groups we have heard.

Their names carries the inspiration of the 'old city' of Santiago, that 'corner' of the world which is new in its sound, and its aspirations for freedom and democracy.
